MIDDLE SCORE

Behavior varies between lower and higher extraversion traits depending on the situation. May be comfortable working with people all day, then need solitary time at night. Or may be comfortable working alone during the day, then socializing in the evening. May also be okay with a small group of people all day.

OPENNESS

The degree to which one enjoys variety and new things

LOWER SCORE

Tends to be an implementer, happy with details and keeping things simple. Has little energy for brainstorming ideas and it may take effort when dealing with strategic thinkers. Well suited for jobs that require a specific expertise or involve predictable processes.

AGREEABLENESS

The degree to which one cooperates with others

HIGHER SCORE

Tends to cooperate with others. Generally humble and trusting. Thinks first about how situations affect people and puts others first. Well suited for customer service, social work and non-profit organizations.

CONSCIENTIOUSNESS

How disciplined, driven and structured someone is to achieve specific goals

HIGHER SCORE

Generally focused on one or two goals; very driven. Tends to be organized, disciplined and a perfectionist. Those scoring high in this category may be leaders and generally are successful in the corporate world.

6.0 AGREEABLENESS

Agreeableness is the degree to which one cooperates with others

LOWER SCORE: Tends to enjoy competition. Can be proud and focused on own agenda. Thinks logically in most situations and can be skeptical. Well suited for sales, entrepreneurship and leadership positions.

MIDDLE SCORE: Generally balances the needs of others with his/her own needs and balances the needs of the business with employee and customer needs. Moderately trusting and may enjoy some level of acknowledgement.

HIGHER SCORE: Tends to cooperate with others. Generally humble and trusting. Thinks first about how situations affect people and puts others first. Well suited for customer service, social work and non-profit organizations.
